“ Mr. Clem was an important influence in my life while a student at Saint Thomas Choir School in the late 70-early 80's. His hands were full with my less than stellar academic performance. His strong impact on my life is something that I will always remember and cherish.

“ Gordon was a friend, mentor and inspiration to so many of us in NAIS, NYSAIS, and Episcopal schools as we found our way in teaching and school leadership. Calm, centered, and clear he was also enormously generous with his support and wisdom. Gordon lives on in the lives and work of so many, including my own.

“ I met Gordon Clem as a (brief in my case) member of the choir of Trinity Church in Lenox. He was such an inspiration. When I lost my voice through Lyme disease, he was so encouraging, so I still warble as much as I can in the congregation. When I sing I think of him. He will be sorely missed.

“ Of Mr. Clem, David's sister said 'what an institution Mr. Clem was.'
Mr. Clem was such a caring person -- he was gentle, decisive, mainly caring. In 1983 he sent me (in Ethiopia) in addition to the date for David's Choir School audition, a list of other schools in the U.S. -- just in case. He showed concern for what happened to others -- showed it and fostered it in his student charges. Mr. Clem's humanitarian sensibility, broad outreach, accessibility were evident -- the soup kitchen, the school as host to students from South Africa, the Seders. He preferred the encouragement of non-military interest and once let me know his view that of two books I had given David for his birthday, the non-military one was the better choice. I was so touched to learn that when we were living in Israel/Jerusalem during the 1991 Gulf war, some years after David's graduation, Mr. Clem included us in the school's prayers.

“ Gordon has been sending me Christmas and birthday cards for many years now, decades after I was obliged to leave St. Thomas prematurely to assist my family through a difficult time. I became alarmed when my mother had had her Christmas card returned to her. Alas, my fears were justified. I mourn deeply his passing. He was a fatherly figure, one whose steady, quiet voice and taciturn wisdom buoyed and comforted me many a day. That year with him was one of the very happiest of my youth. I loved the man, and have striven to emulate his kindness and generosity. If only I could have remained under his tutelage a few years longer! I console myself that I was fortunate enough to have ever gotten to know him. He, I hope, would be pleased with what I've tried to make of my life. His influence luminesces.

“ I was both a friend and colleague with Gordon on the Vestry at Trinity Church for many years. We also served together on the Trustees for the Diocese of Western Massachusetts since 1999. He was on the "Community Investment" committee that looked for organizations & small businesses that could not qualify for bank loans. That work was very successful for the committee and for the Trustees. While at Trinity, Gordon would lead Hymn Sings in the Parish House. He played the piano and to the delight of everyone played their favorite hymn. He was very talented and very much a Gentleman. It was my pleasure to know him and respect him as a dear friend.

“ When French Teacher at St Thomas Choir School in the Seventies, I found in Gordon Clem the most decent and caring headmaster in all professional settings I had been in. Quite some years later I am able to confirm this rare feeling. I enjoyed his respect to my teaching as well as to a faithful friendship lasting the time I've been living away from the States.
Missing him, I shall keep his memory as one of a wonderful human being.
To all who respected, enjoyed and loved him my deepest condolences.

“ It was not always easy being so distant from home. Gordon's door was always open to us both when times were good but also during the difficult moments, such that he was a real adoptive father, and his mentoring love helped form us in a special bond of brotherhood that remains to this day. Among my fondest memories is how we would get together with him as 8th graders before bedtime to talk, to share in a Christian story that was upbuilding in faith, and to pray. He taught us how to care for each other, but also how to love the world around us in a tangible way. We would make numerous meals for the homeless with him in the Saturday soup kitchen, then breaking into small groups – sometimes being in his group – to take warm meals to the homeless in the often significant cold. It taught us valuable lessons in treating those less fortunate as our neighbors in the human family and to love without counting any cost to ourselves. Birthday card after birthday card later from Gordon over decades, he's still been a strong mentor — always loving beyond himself and asking the latest news — building us as an ever-growing Saint Thomas family even into retirement. He was faithful to us even to the very end, leaving us a precious legacy in how to love one another. Gordon's personal impact on my priestly ministry has been profound.
